A 20-year-old Natick man who was arrested in August on multiple drug charges, pleaded guilty Tuesday to possession with intent to distribute marijuana, committing a drug violation near a school zone, and possession of a firearm without a license.

Jonathon Cook was sentenced by Framingham District Court Judge Robert V. Greco to six months in jail, according to Middlesex District Attorney Gerry Leone.

Cook, whose mother and stepfather are prominent lawyers, was arrested when Natick police searched the family home at 15 Glen St. in Natick, where Cook had been staying. Investigators said they found 15 bags of marijuana, a scale and other drug paraphernalia, $700 including marked bills used in controlled buys, a pair of brass knuckles with knives attached, and a shotgun.

Police also found that a bedroom closet appeared to have been used as a growing room for marijuana.

Investigators then discovered that the Cook had an active restraining order against him at the time of the search warrant and was not allowed to be in possession of any firearms.

According to police, detectives started investigating Cook after he was shot in the hand during a July 31 armed invasion at the Glen Street home.

The home invasion investigation is still ongoing, said police spokesman Lieutenant Brian Grasse.

Cook's mother is attorney Kathy Jo Cook, former president of the Women's Bar Association of Massachusetts, and his stepfather is Timothy Wilton, a full time faculty member at Suffolk University Law School.

At the time of his arrest Cook told police that his mother and stepfather knew about his drug business and failed to stop it. They have denied the allegation.
