By Matt Rocheleau, Town Correspondent

The plans to redesign a two-mile corridor in the neighborhood's center were unveiled at a public meeting this week, more than two and a half years after the project was announced.

The draft plans and a presentation from Tuesday's meeting were posted to the city redevelopment authority's website Thursday afternoon and are currently in a one-month public review and comment period.

The city's redevelopment authority, transportation department, mayor's neighborhood services office, a community advisory group, and the project consultant will work "hand-in-hand" with local residents and abutters along the corridor to create the final designs in 2011, said Vineet Gupta, director of planning at the city's transportation department.

The Centre and South Transportation and Streetscape Action Plan is an effort to improve the area from the Jackson Square T station on Centre Street to the Forest Hills T station on South Street. It focuses on transportation, business and streetscape issues.
