Police have issued a warrant for a suspect who allegedly stabbed a Boston College senior about one week ago, and they hope to make an arrest soon, the school's spokesman says.

On Sept. 25, Jeremiah Hegarty, was stabbed in the abdomen shortly after midnight outside a cluster of apartment-style dormitories in Lower Campus in Brighton.

Four men were detained by campus police after the incident. However, the stabbing suspect fled, officials said. None of the five men have a previous connection to the college or to Hegarty, BC spokesman Jack Dunn said Monday.

He said the incident remains under investigation and campus police, who directed inquiries to Dunn, are not releasing information on the identity of the suspect.

Despite initial reports from police, only one of the four detained men, Santos Carrasquillo, 21, of Cambridge, has been arrested, Dunn said. The other three were released but will be charged with trespassing in Brighton District Court, he said Monday.

After being arraigned two days later on a charge of kicking a 29-year-old Newton man – not the stabbing victim – in the head during the incident, Carrasquillo was freed on $2,000 bail.

Dunn said that Hegarty, a management student, is out of the hospital, doing well, and hopeful about returning to classes soon.

"Boston College is an exceptionally safe campus, and we view this as an anomalous issue," Dunn has said in previous interviews.

The stabbing came one day after the fatal stabbing of 18-year-old Elhaji Malick Ndiaye at Regis College in Weston. Neither Ndiaye, of Waltham, nor a second stabbing victim, a 22-year-old friend of his who survived, were students at Regis. A Wheelock College student was arraigned Friday and charged with killing Ndiaye.

City police contacted Monday afternoon said the department is not involved with the investigation. Anyone with information should contact Boston
