BEACON HILL

Number of Beacon Hill parking permits rose 19 percent since 2008

The number of parking permits assigned to Beacon Hill residents climbed 19 percent over the past two years, but is still below the level of residential permits from four years ago, according to city records.

Under the resident parking program, residents apply for a permit that allows them to park in designated areas on their neighborhood's streets without getting ticketed. The program is free, but requires annual renewal and sometimes a few circles around the block to nab an empty spot.

Increases in permit figures reflect the city's effort to expand the permit parking program in several communities, said city transportation spokeswoman Tracey Ganiatsos. The South End, North End, South Boston, Dorchester, East Boston, Roxbury, West Roxbury, Chinatown, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain and Charlestown all have more active resident permits now than four years ago.

"In the past few years, at the request of neighborhood residents, [the city] expanded the program in several neighborhoods," says Ganiatsos. "When the program is expanded to additional streets in a neighborhood, more residents will apply for permits to be able to park in close proximity to their homes."

In April 2006, there were 3,583 active permits in Beacon Hill. The total dropped to 2,749 by January 2008 and climbed to 3,276 as of a week ago.

Resident parking spaces are most common in the downtown neighborhoods as well as near transit stations in all neighborhoods "to act as a deterrent to all day parking by commuters," Ganiatsos said.

The program expanded to include residential streets near local business districts "to encourage turnover at on-street spaces and discourage all-day employee parking," she said.
