Bike lanes will be added to a three-mile long stretch of Blue Hill Avenue this month as part of an effort to increase the number of rider-friendly thoroughfares citywide.

The lanes will be installed on Blue Hill Avenue from its intersection with Warren Street to where the road meets with River Street.

"Blue Hill Ave is a primary route for cyclists getting between the southern portions of Boston and downtown," said an announcement about the project from the city and Boston Bikes. "Our number one goal is always safety. This plan will also improve safety."

The installation of paint or thermoplastic and accompanying signs will be done mostly between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. on business days.

The road will remain open, though parked cars may need to be moved when work is ongoing.

The project will not take away parking spaces, nor will it cause an increase in traffic.
