A new, permanent home is being sought for a cat rescued from a moving car in Roxbury.

Veterinarians at the MSPCA Angell said the cat is available for adoption and is recovering from a broken leg she suffered when, according to witnesses, she was thrown from a car window.

Amanda and Kimberly Troisi were driving near Dudley Square on June 29 when they saw the cat thrown from a car. The couple quickly pulled over, picked up the frightened, injured cat and brought her to the Shalit-Glazer Clinic, which aids homeless animals.

Veterinarians performed surgery to mend the fractured rear leg and have since named her Cleo.

"Cleo has been recovering well and is alternating between chasing toys and napping in the sunlight," the animal medical center said in a statement.

"Cleo is an especially lucky cat because of Amanda and Kimberly's quick thinking," said a veterinarian for the Shalit-Glazer Clinic. "I'm grateful that she made it to us and we were able to heal her ahead of finding a loving and permanent home for her."
