Days before most Boston youths picked up backpacks and returned to classes, some 200 others picked up diplomas and celebrated the end of high school.

Those students worked throughout the summer to graduate as part of the Boston Public Schools Class of 2012 during a special ceremony attended by friends, family, and local leaders on the evening of Aug. 27 at White Stadium in Franklin Park in Jamaica Plain, city school officials said.

The district-wide summer credit recovery program gives students who are only a few credits shy of graduation the chance to complete their coursework and meet the requirements needed for a high school degree.
