Authorities are investigating anti-Semitic graffiti found this morning on a residence for Jewish students at Wheaton College in Norton, according to a campus-wide e-mail from school President Ronald A. Crutcher.

“Crude and hateful graffiti” was found on the back door of the Jewish Life House at 17 Howard St., Crutcher wrote. Students at the house have reported being targeted before, including derogatory remarks shouted from the street as recently as Friday evening.

“I want to be clear: this will not be tolerated,” he said. “Wheaton is committed to appreciating, understanding and celebrating diversity. Every individual--student, faculty and staff member--has the right to feel welcomed and safe on our campus and in our community.”

Campus police and Norton police are investigating, Wheaton College spokesman Michael Graca said.

The college president said a campus meeting will be held to discuss the incident further. Graca said the meeting has not yet been scheduled.

Anyone with information is asked to contact the Wheaton Public Safety Department at 508-286-8213, Norton police at 508-285-3300 or the school's Dean of Students Office at 508-286-8218.

Cardinal discussed archdiocese reorganization in first-ever live webchat

Cardinal Sean P. O'Malley, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston, on Friday called his new plan to reorganize the archdiocese a strategy for rebuilding rather than downsizing, and said he hoped it would rejuvenate the priesthood. "If we are going to evangelize well, parishes need to be grouped in a way that resources can be deployed toward outreach, welcoming, and the growth of the church in our archdiocese," O'Malley told readers in his first-ever live webchat on Boston.com.

Turkeys wear out their welcome in Newton

Frieda Dweck has taken her ongoing battle with the wild turkeys of Newton to a new level. Night after night, she arms herself with a tennis racket and balls before heading outside to shoo the big birds out of the trees surrounding her home. For Dweck and many of her neighbors, the novelty of seeing wildlife thriving in suburbia has worn off. At a recent forum on coyotes and turkeys, residents grouched about messy and aggressive turkeys and cat-killing coyotes.

From bad to worse for a bitter Mitt Romney

Mitt Romney has found the secret to winning a presidential campaign: giveaways. Specifically, giveaways to the people of color and immigrants — groups that supported Barack Obama in droves. It's a strikingly bitter response from a man who isn't used to losing and doesn't seem to take it well. But shedding the goal of being a standard-bearer for an increasingly intolerant Republican Party doesn't have to be all bad for someone who struggled to adapt himself to its positions.

Federal prosecutors say Whitey Bulger's claim of immunity is 'frivolous and absurd'

Prosecutors have asked a federal judge to determine before trial whether James "Whitey" Bulger has any standing to raise an immunity claim, arguing that the "frivolous" claim should not be brought before a jury in the high-profile case. "Otherwise, the trial of this matter will become unduly elongated and unmanageable," prosecutors said late Friday in court filings. Prosecutors said the notorious gangster's "pure fantasy" that he was granted immunity for his crimes should not continue to slow down the case.
