Jose Guzman, 42, was also ordered to serve five years of probation after his prison sentence, officials said.

Conditions of his probation include: he undergo sex offender evaluation and treatment; he cannot have any contact with children under 16; cannot loiter in areas where children tend to congregate; and cannot use the Internet except for work-related reasons and is specifically barred from visiting, entering, or using any online chat room bulletin board service or social networking site, prosecutors said.

State Police arrested Guzman in January 2011 at his Jamaica Plain home, where they found numerous videos of child pornography, authorities said.
