The market is a collaboration between the temple, Theodore Parker Unitarian Universalist Church, West Roxbury Main Streets, and Silverbrook Farm in Dartmouth, which will sell its produce including fruits, vegetables, eggs, cl and jams.

Organizers of the market said they are working now to register 50 families who would agree to buy products from the farm on a weekly basis throughout the season.

The group of families would form a CSA, or community-supported agriculture, and would buy weekly “shares” of farm produce for a 19-week span.

A half share, which is estimated to feed two people, costs $20.50 per week.
