The program, founded in the fall of 2009 by Massachusetts General Hospital and the Red Sox Foundation, provides clinical care for Iraq and Afghanistan veterans and families experiencing post-traumatic stress, deployment stress and traumatic brain injury. The program also offers clinical education and works on research to improve treatment for those conditions.

The new reduced fares, called the Downeaster Home Base Discount, are provided through a partnership between the program, Amtrak Downeaster, Red Sox Foundation and the Wounded Heroes Program of Maine.

“Taking the financial burden off our service members for traveling to Home Base makes it that much easier to plug them into quality care for brain injury as well as psychological injuries,” said a statement from Pam Payeur, director of the program in Maine. “Collaborating with the Home Base team allows us to bring our wounded consistent, comprehensive care. This makes it possible to help them get their lives on track and reduce the impact of these types of injuries.”

“We are proud to partner with the Home Base Program at Mass General Hospital and the Amtrak Downeaster to provide our wounded Maine veterans with the best care available for traumatic brain injury, or TBI, and post-traumatic stress disorder, or PTSD,” she said.
