A motorcyclist was killed in a collision with a Jeep SUV in Dorchester, Boston police said Sunday. Officers responded to Washington and Roslin streets about 4:45 p.m. Saturday and found a man lying on the ground, police said. The man, who was not identified, was taken to Boston Medical Center, where he was later pronounced dead, police said. Boston police spokeswoman Neva Coakley said Sunday that officials were investigating the crash, including whether it was a hit-and-run. Coakley said she could not provide additional information about the Jeep or its driver. Anyone with information is asked to call detectives at 617-343-4470. Information can also be provided anonymously by calling CrimeStoppers at 800-494-8477 or by texting the word TIP to 27463.

Officials warn residents about displaced bears

The Vermont Fish and Wildlife Department is warning residents about displaced, agitated bears due to the fickle winter. A lack of snow exposes dens and winter rain can make bears uncomfortable and restless, both factors that can cause them to awaken and abandon their dens, said Bear Project Leader Forrest Hammond. The department said it has received reports of bears at bird feeders, in residential areas and in the back country. A bear is reported to have killed a hunter's beagle in Elmore. Disrupted bears sometimes produce nests of spruce boughs in dense evergreen thickets so hare and rabbit hunters should be extra wary of these areas, the department said.

Exotic monkey seized from home

Connecticut officials have seized a small, exotic monkey from a home in Waterbury and charged a woman living there after the animal scratched her 10-year-old daughter. Television station WFSB reported Saturday that Mariantonia Morales was charged with risk of injury to a minor and owning an exotic pet. Morales' daughter was with a friend when the child opened the cage containing the palm-sized marmoset monkey. Morales tells WFSB-TV that the monkey scratched her daughter and she applied an antibiotic to the wound. Investigators say Morales did not take her daughter to hospital and authorities only learned of the incident after a teacher questioned the girl on what caused her injury.
