The MBTA's Silver Line will run on a modified schedule Wednesday with additional service during peak travel times to shuttle riders to and from Logan Airport, the agency announced.

The extra Silver Line service will continue through Monday, T officials said.

The Red, Orange, Blue and Green lines as well as all commuter rail lines and bus routes will operate on regular weekday schedules Wednesday.

On Thanksgiving Day, all of the aforementioned T transit lines will run on Sunday schedules except for: 66 bus routes (see them all here) and for four commuter rail lines – the Fairmount, Greenbush, Kingston/Plymouth and Needham – which will not run at all.

On Friday, the Red, Orange and Blue lines and all commuter rail lines and bus routes will run on regular weekday schedules; the Green Line will run on a Saturday schedule; and the Silver Line will run on a modified weekday schedule with some additional service.

The Silver "Line" is a bus. Get back to me when Massachusetts decides to properly invest in mass transit infrastructure.

They have increased Silver Line service but the Red Line will run on its regular schedule. How do the geniuses at the T and Mass DOT think people get to the silver line?
