Study: Massachusetts is the 9th least federally dependent state in US

By Matt Rocheleau

Boston.com Staff

MARCH 26, 2014 12:58 PM

Mississippi, New Mexico, Alabama, Louisiana and Maine rank as the five most federally dependent states, while Delaware, Illinois, Minnesota, New Jersey and Connecticut are the five least federally-dependent states, the study found.

Researchers said the analysis also found that on average Democrat-leaning “blue” states are less dependent on the federal government than Republican-leaning “red” states.

Conversely, another recent WalletHub analysis found that Democrat-leaning “blue” states tend to impose higher state and local tax rates than Republican-leaning “red” states.

For the federal dependence analysis, the site said it used three metrics to compile the rankings: return on taxes paid to the federal government; federal funding as a percentage of state revenue; and the number of federal employees per capita.

Massachusetts had the 13th lowest return on federal income tax; the 17th highest independent state revenue and the 19th fewest federal employees per capita, the study said.

For the state and local tax rate rankings, the site said it used: real estate tax; state income tax Income; local income tax; vehicle property tax; vehicle sales tax; sales and use tax; fuel tax; alcohol tax; food tax; and telecom tax.

Massachusetts ranked 21st on the list of states with the lowest average state and local tax bill, at $6,884, which was 1 percent below the national average, according to the study. When adjusted based on the cost of living index, Massachusetts ranked 35th.
