

Table: What Mass. Environmental Police officers made last year

By Matt Rocheleau

GLOBE STAFF AUGUST 27, 2018

Members of the Massachusetts Environmental Police regularly take overtime assignments and off-duty details in the middle of the workday, scheduling their normal state work around more profitable side gigs, according to payroll records. Agency officials and Governor Charlie Baker vowed to crack down on the practice following media reports two years ago, but the routine continues today. Read more, here.

The table below shows how much both sworn and civilian personnel at the agency made in 2017.

Employees with the highest total earnings are shown first.
